MISCELLANEOUS READING. THE FROZEN BROOK. This exquisite description is taken from a poem by James R. Lowell, entitled "The Vision of Sir Launtal:" Down swept the chill wind from the mountain

From the snow five thousand summers old; On open wold and hill-top bleak It had gathered all the cold; And whirl'd it like sleet on the wanderer's cheek; It carried a shiver everywhere From the unleaf'd boughs and pastures bare; The little brook heard it and built a roof Neath which he could house him, winter-proof; All night by the white stars' frosty gleams He groin'd his arches and match'd his beams; Slender and clear were his crystal spars As the lashes of light that trim the stars; He sculptured every summer delight In his halls and chambers out of sight; Sometimes his tinkling waters slipt Down through a frost leaved, forest crypt; Long, sparkling aisles of steel-stemmed trees Bending to counterfeit a breeze; Sometimes the roof no fretwork knew But silvery mosses that downward grew; Sometimes it was carved it sharp relief, With quaint arabesques of ice fern leaf, Sometimes it was simply smooth and clear For the gladness of heaven to shine through, and

He had caught the nodding bulrush's tops And hung them thickly with diamond drops, Which crystall'd the beams of moon and sun, FOR APRIL, AT FRENCH'S Book And made a star of every one; No mortal builder's most rare device Could match this winter-palace of ice; Twas as if every image that mirror'd lay In his depths serene through the summer day, Each fitting shadow of earth and sky, Lest the happy model should be lost, Had been mimicked in fairy masonry

By the elfin builders of the frost. A MODERN BELLE.

She sits in her fashionable parlor, and rocks in her easy chair; She is clad in silks and satins, and jewels are in her hair ;

She winks, and giggles, and simpers, and simpers and giggles and winks, And though she talks but little, 'tis a vast deal more than she thinks. She lies a bed in the morning, till near the hour of nuon,

Then comes down snapping and snarling, because she is called so soon, Her hair is still in papers, her cheeks still "fresh" with paint: Remains of last night's blushes, before she intended to faint. She dotes on men unshaven, and men with the flowing hair; She is eloquent over mustaches, they give such a toreign air! She talks of Italian music, and falls in love with narrative of seven years' Explorations and Adthe moon.

And if a mouse was to meet her, she would sink away in a swoon. Her feet are so very little, her hands are so very white, Her jewels are so very heavy, and her head so very light; Her color is made of cosmetics (though this she will never own,) Her body's made mostly of cotton, her heart is made wholly of stone. She falls in love with a fellow who swells with a foreign air:

He marries her for her money, she marries him for his-hair! One of the best matches-both are well mated in life-

She's got a foel for a husband, he's got a fool for a wife. HE'S COMING. The following, clipped from the Louisville Journal, is about as sweet a little thing of the kind, as we have ever seen : He's coming, the blushing rose Whispers it low to me, And the starlight hastens with it, Over the twilight sea, All trembling the zephyrs tell me, On the light winds hurrying past, And my own heart quickly beating,

Coming, coming at last.

The soft-lipped waves of the ocean, Gathering at my feet, Breeze-borne from the coral island, Murmur the secret sweet. There's not a dew steeped blossom Or glistening orange tree, But furnish its leaves glee laden, To breathe this joy to me. List! that is the sound of rowing Stealing along the air,

I must gather around my temples This weight of braided hair. And trust to growing darkness, And evening shadows dim, To hide with their wings the traces Of tears I've shed for him. TUST RECEIVED AND FOR SALE-
